LICENSE COMMISSIONERS.

Gov. Bachelder Makes The Appointments Today.

Hon. Cyrus A. Little Of Manchester
Is The Chairman.

His Associates Are Hon. John Kivel
of Dover and H. W. Keyes of Haverhill.

Hon. Cyrus A. Little, of Manchester, chairman;
H. W. Keyes, of Haverhill;
Hon. John Kivel, of Dover.

Above are the names of the three state license commissioners, under the new liquor law.

According to a special despatch from Concord to the Herald, the appointments were made by Governor Bachelder at eleven o'clock this forenoon, directly after he had affixed
his official signature to the bill.

Mr. Little and Mr. Keyes, representing Hillsborough and Grafton counties, are republicans, while Mr.
Kivel, the Strafford county member,
is a democrat.

The chairman, Mr. Little, is one of the brainiest lawyers in this state.
The same may be said of Mr. Kivel.

Hon. Cyrus A. Little.

Mr. Keyes is the "farmer" member of the commission. Up in the north county where he belongs, he is influential and highly esteemed.

Mr. Little is ex-speaker of the New Hampshire house of representatives, prominent club man of Manchester and holds an enviable position in the professional and social life of the Queen city.

Mr. Kivel is one of Dover's police commissioners and a criminal lawyer of superior ability. Of the members of the New Hampshire bar, none ranks any higher in intellect, understanding of the law or acknowledged integrity. In this city, Mr. Kivel is well known. He has been here today and directly his appointment on the commission became known among his friends, they hastened to congratulate him.

BEAD WORK POPULAR.

Bead work is exceedingly popular with Portsmouth young ladies at present, and many handsome belts, purses and watch charms are in process of construction. This work is a revival of one of the arts in which our grandmothers took much pride,
as is evidenced by some beautiful pieces still in existence. One girl exhibits with pardonable pride a bead chain of very elaborate design made by her grandmother years ago.

THIS IS UNDOUBTED EVIDENCE.

"Hart Bachelder put his thumb out of place playing ball one day last week," says the East Sebago correspondent of the Portland Press. For the last few weeks we have been watching the columns of our exchanges for undoubted evidence that spring had arrived in Maine. We have noted the first robin, the skunk cabbage, the first hand-organ, the receipt of congressional garden seeds,
the appearance of fresh spruce gum in the local market, the drop in the price of lobsters, and other signs that are seldom known to fail except possibly during an unusually severe drouth, but not one of these nor all combined have led to such a feeling of security in the belief that spring was really here as this brief item conveying the information that Hart Bachelder has put his thumb out of place playing ball.

KITTERY.

Kittery, Me., March 27.
The second and closing evening of the Kittery Baseball club fair and entertainment was equally as largely attended, and the exercises
just as interesting as on the opening night. The pretty booths began to wear a deserted look toward the latter part of the evening and the confectionery was a dream of the past. There was great sport at the fish pond when the prizes were drawn. The following program was finely rendered:
Piano selection.

Then followed the drawing of the prizes and at the conclusion of this,
dancing was in order.

The members of the club feel truly grateful to their friends for their patronage and to the young ladies who so kindly assisted them from the time the fair was first planned. It is safe to say they have cleared a hundred dollars, which will be judiciously expended.

Next in order by way of entertainment will be the Kittery High school entertainment and dance on April 2.

Miss Marion Abrams has gone to Wakefield, Mass., to visit her sister, Mrs. Greenleaf, who has been poorly for some time.

last night at the home of his mother, Mrs. Susan Dunbar, on Government street. Mr. Deane came here on Monday suffering with a severe cold, which suddenly developed into congestion of the lungs.

quite ill, is slowly improving.

Mrs. C. M. DeRochemont is visiting friends in South Berwick.

Miss Mary Pickering passed Wednesday at Elliot, as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Staples.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. H. Foss and daughter, who have been visiting Mrs. Harriet Hoyt, returned to their home in Rye on Wednesday.

Mrs. M. S. Dudley passed Wednesday in Dover.

D. W. Badger still remains quite ill with the mumps. His daughter, Miss Edith, is just recovering from an attack of the same.

Miss Gail Hoyt leaves on Friday
for a few days' visit with Miss Nellie Eldridge. She will return home on Monday, accompanied by Miss Eldridge, who will pass the vacation
week as her guest.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Greenough and Miss Mary S. Pickering will leave on Friday for a visit at Washington.

On Thursday afternoon, a prayer meeting under the direction of the Christian Endeavor society was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
J. E. Downing. The leader for the afternoon was Miss Hannah Pickering.

Quite a large number of members were present and a very interesting and profitable meeting was held. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Laws on April 2.

FRETFUL PORCUPINE AGAIN.

Real Article Presented to Senator
Page By Representative Merrill.

Presentations were somewhat in order in the legislature on Thursday, and one that occasioned a great deal of enjoyment in one way and another was the affair in the senate chamber during the temporary administration of Senator Keyes in the president's chair.

Just before the close of the morning session, Representative Merrill, author of the hedgehog bill which had such a successful and triumphant passage through the legislature, entered the chamber with a large cage in his arms. In the cage was a large hedgehog, loaded to the muzzle with rapid firing quills.

Representative Merrill deposited the cage at the desk of Senator Page. The senator from district 24 knew it was up to him to look pleasant. He not only looked that way, but he went one or two better and laughed heartily. The remainder of the dignified senate household, including the solemn Shackford and the austere Thorpe, unbent itself and joined in the laugh.

Representative Merrill then informed the senate that, at his request, the boys up Stoddard way,
where hedgehogs are plenty as flies in the summer time, went out and knocked one from a roost and gave it to him to bring down to Concord for Senator Page, who, it was understood, desired to become better acquainted with the character of the rodent. It was the impression that a study of the real thing at close range was necessary, so he had brought the hedgehog in to Senator Page and the latter was at liberty to engage rooms for it at the hotel or hitch it to one of the statues in the state house yard.

Senator Page responded pleasantly and to the point, or, rather, the many points of the gift, thanking Representative Merrill for the opportunity afforded the statesman from the twenty-fourth to gather interesting information of the habits of the article hedgehog. The senator explained that he appreciated the gift in a financial sense as well as in other ways. The head, he said, would bring him twenty-five cents in New Hampshire; the tail would fetch thirty cents in Vermont, and the residue might swell the receipts to something like $5.

Senator Hoyt offered a resolution to the effect that the senator from the twenty-fourth be restrained from realizing any bounty on the hedgehog. The resolution was adopted.

Senator Neal, for the committee on education, offered a resolution to the effect that the hedgehog was of no use to the community as a member of society; that its only industrious habits were the gnawing of the crust from trees and the turning of coon dogs into pincushions; that any senator having a hedgehog in his possession should be considered guilty of fracturing the laws of the state in depriving the rural sportsmen of the money which might otherwise have been realized by turning the rodent's head over to the secretary of state, and that the offender should be subjected to a fine of twenty-five cents or a bundle of cigars.

This resolution was also adopted.
Senator Foley had a resolution up his sleeve relating to the physical welfare of the hedgehog and the financial concern of the taxpayers.

Senator Allen at this point moved that the whole matter be indefinitely postponed, but was voted down.

Senator Page offered a joint resolution to the effect that the senate appropriate $500 to enable Thomas J. Foley to bring Bill Bailey home.
Everything in sight was adopted and ordered printed, then the senate adjourned and led the hedgehog down to the lobby, where it held an impromptu reception.

is thought that larger quarters than those at present used will soon be necessary.

Gen. Gale Replies To Challenge Of Dr. Severance.

Fred E. Moore The Successful Candidate For School Treasurership.

Budget of Other Timely Topics From Our Special Correspondent.

Exeter, March 26.

The Exeter News Letter will publish tomorrow General Stephen H. Gale's reply to Dr. Albert T. Severance's recent challenge to debate. General Gale's answer is as follows:

Exeter, March 25, 1903.

"Dr. Albert T. Severance, Exeter, N. H."

"My dear Doctor: A despatch from Exeter in the Boston Herald, dated March 19, first informed me that 'Dr. Albert T. Severance, a representative from Exeter in the legislature and a leader among the prohibitionists of the house will tomorrow make public a challenge to General Stephen H. Gale to debate with him the liquor issue in the Exeter town hall, for the benefit of the Cottage hospital or to some other worthy object'."

"I supposed it was a joke aimed at you for having avoided debate on the liquor issue last fall and during the exciting sessions of the house of representatives last week. It did not occur to one that you actually contemplated challenging me or any other person to a 'debate on the liquor issue' at this late date, nor could I imagine how the 'Cottage hospital' or some other worthy object could be benefitted by a debate of that kind, as the idea of having a brass band and charging twenty-five cents admission to the town hall was not advanced in the despatch to the Herald."

"In the Exeter News-Letter of last Friday under big head lines appears a communication signed by you, from which it appears that I have been actually 'challenged,' but having received no direct communication from you until today, I have not considered the question seriously until now."

"Briefly analyzed, your challenge seems based on the facts that you have received a pamphlet containing my views on the liquor question which are somewhat at variance with your own; that 'Prohibition or License' is prominently before the people of New Hampshire at the present time, and to your assumption that Exeter will soon have to choose which it will have; therefore a debate on 'Resolved That Exeter should vote for prohibition,' with brass band accompaniment 'might draw a full house at twenty-five cents a ticket.' Your suggestion that the gross receipts be donated to the 'Cottage hospital or some other worthy object explains the beneficent idea underlying the whole proposition."

"Considering the reasons given for this challenge in reverse order, I find it difficult to share your opinion that the people of Exeter are so anxious to hear you and me debate this subject that they would willingly pay twenty-five cents each for admission to the hall—even with the added attraction of a brass band. So I think the beneficent feature need not be discussed."

"Resolved That Exeter should vote for prohibition' might be discussed academically. I suppose but as the unanimous vote of Exeter for prohibition in court, not guarantee that policy to the town the discussion would be productive of but little if any good. The act just passed by the legislature has taken away from Exeter, and every other town and city of the state the right to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors within its boundaries, and given to a state board of license commissioners, to consist of three men, the power to grant licenses for the sale of liquor to any number of hotels, drug stores and railroad restaurants in Exeter or elsewhere, even should the towns vote no license."

"On Jan. 21 last more than two months ago I sent to every member of the legislature a copy of the pamphlet you say you have received. On page three I said 'The state board should neither attempt to force license upon a community that does not want it, or deny license to a community that does want it. Towns and cities should be free to decide for themselves whether liquor shall or shall not be sold within their borders, and if deciding to permit the sale, they should not be denied the right to regulate what extent and on what terms the selling should be permitted. Each city and town should have power to determine the number and kind of licenses it will grant and the fee it will exact for each kind of license issued.'

The act just passed by the legislature does not leave it to the decision of Exeter's vote whether licenses shall be granted to hotels, drug stores or railroad restaurants. If I interpret the law correctly, Exeter is, in effect, permitted to vote for or against two kinds of licenses only, that for the open saloon or bar room and that for a wholesale liquor dealer. I did what I could to have it otherwise by issuing that pamphlet, for I could not debate the question in the house of representatives, as I am not a member of that body. I do not see what good is to be accomplished by debating it now. It is like locking the stable door after the horse is stolen."

"You suggest that this resolution may be stated conversely, or 'Resolved That Exeter should vote for license,' which, under the new law means that Exeter should vote for open saloons, bar rooms and wholesale liquor depots. This question is debatable, if you can find some one to take the affirmative to your negation; but you must excuse me from sacrificing my own views merely to afford you an opportunity to debate the liquor issue after it has been reduced by an act of the legislature to nothing more than bar rooms or no bar rooms."

"It is difficult to regard your 'challenge' as issued in good faith, when rightly interpreted; because, in a letter mailed to every voter in town Oct. 8, 1902, I distinctly stated that I was not in favor of open bar rooms in Exeter. Now you ask me to advocate them, while you defend the town from their invasion. Is it not asking a little too much?"

"I have been in favor of the restriction of the liquor traffic through the medium of a good, sound, local option law, under which the sale of liquor, if permitted, could be effectively regulated; or prohibition, I adopted, could be strictly enforced. The question of the saloon would be settled under such a law by each community for itself, as it properly should be, for as I said on page five of my pamphlet, 'Population and conditions of life vary in different localities out of which arise popular sentiment upon the liquor question differing according to its engendering forces. Recognition of these facts and a due regard therefor in the formation of our laws will give us law that will be enforced and will prove satisfactory.'"

"The character of population and conditions of life in Exeter do not in my opinion, call for the open saloon while the requirements of the town as an educational center are in position to that form of the liquor traffic but while public sentiment in Exeter is wisely opposed to the keeping of saloons here, I think there are many in town who would agree with me, that in Manchester, Nashua, Portsmouth and other places, in the state, population and conditions of life may be such that saloons properly conducted, may actually reduce the evils of intemperance for wiser men than you and have contended, Doctor. At any rate it is a question that neither you or I will be called upon to settle at this time."

"I am at a loss to understand why you should want to debate the liquor issue at this late day. You have had golden opportunities not only to indulge in debate, but what is far more important to defend your name on the floor of the house of representatives and yet you discarded them. Who knows what might have happened last Thursday afternoon or evening had you stood shoulder to shoulder with that other prohibition leader, Hon. Daniel C. Remick and raised your voice in solemn protest against the passage of the bill to license the sale of intoxicating liquors in New Hampshire? Why did you not do that, Doctor? Why did you not debate the liquor issue at that time when debate meant something? Why did you sit in silence while the real fight was on? What good will your battle do now? I do not believe it would interest our friends in Exeter to any appreciable extent and for that reason with others have given I must beg to be excused from accepting your 'challenge.' But if you will permit me to suggest a discussion that might be interesting at the present time, I will suggest that you meet me at Exeter some evening in the town hall and while he is a man of the judiciary liquor committee explain and defend the law as applied to draft you might tell the people of Exeter what you would have said in the house of representatives in opposition to it. Had you felt inclined to debate before the battle was lost."

"I should not advise selling tickets at twenty-five cents each, because it might keep some who ought to be instructed away, but if a brass band is desired, it should be per-

This afternoon in the probate court room Coroner William H. Nute held an inquest on the death of Edson R. Reynolds, who was killed at Powwow River on Tuesday, while unloading electric poles for the Rockingham Light and Power company. The jury was composed of Hiram L. Towell, G. F. Morrill and J. F. Currier. The evidence was as follows:

The first witness called was Dr. Walter Tuttle, who examined the body the next day. He said the upper part of the head was crushed and the head and its inner organs were all bruised and crushed. He said that the whole body was bruised and scratched somewhat, but mostly in the limbs. He thought that death was caused by the crushing of the skull.

John E. Towle, an inspector of poles and supplies, was the next witness. Mr. Towle is employed by the Rockingham Light and Power company. He said that he was at Powwow that morning and cut the top wire that bound the poles. Mr. Reynolds cut the side wire, which parted at the first blow. He did not attempt to move. In Mr. Towle's opinion, he stood looking at it. The pole started, striking him, bearing him to the ground and several others also rolled over him. He said the men began to remove the poles at once and they did everything in their power to aid Reynolds. Mr. Towle went to East Kingston and notified the first selectman of the accident.

On the cross examination Mr. Towle said he told Reynolds how to stand when cutting the wires. He also said he had been in a similar position himself in reply to Judge Emery. Mr. Towle said Reynolds never had cut the top wire.

The next witness called was John Farsh of East Kingston, who was employed by Mr. Reynolds. He said Reynolds cut off three stakes, which he said the poles, and Mr. Towle cut the top wire. His testimony differed a little from that of Mr. Towle, for he said that as soon as Reynolds cut the wire, he started away, but he poles overtook him and bore him to the ground. He said he did not hear Mr. Towle issue any orders to Mr. Reynolds about unloading the poles.

On the cross examination he said he considered it a dangerous place to be in, as the stakes were cut on the side where Reynolds was standing. He repeated that he did not hear Mr. Towle give any orders to Reynolds. John A. Blaisdell of East Kingston was the next witness. Mr. Blaisdell is a prosperous East Kingston farmer and was an eye witness of the accident. He practically corroborated Mr. Marsh's testimony. He said, all of that there were so many poles in Reynolds's body that they could get them off by hand, and horses were brought to the men's assistance. The horses he said drew off thirteen poles and the men took off several more.

Smith Welch of East Kingston next took the stand. He was employed in unloading the poles by Mr. Reynolds. He heard Mr. Towle give Reynolds some orders as to how to cut the wires. He said Mr. Towle told Reynolds to cut the wires and then step aside and to also "keep his eyes and ears open," and to be careful to avoid danger.

After careful deliberation the jury came to the decision that Edson R. Reynolds came to his death by accident.

The annual school meeting was held tonight and was largely attended by reason of the important business on hand.

The meeting was the largest ever held in Exeter, the attendance being about 700, a large number of whom were ladies. The following officers were elected without opposition:

Moderator, Ezekiah Scammons; Clerk, William H. Seward, Member of the school board, Clarence Getchell.

The chief interest centered in the election of a school treasurer. Never has there been so many candidates for an office in this town and there has never been so much enthusiasm displayed. Until this week there were nine candidates for the position, but on Monday a tenth announced his candidacy, but a few days later one withdrew, so that the candidates tonight were Walter E. Burr, Dr. F. E. Charles, Charles E. Adams, John A. Glassey, Dr. A. F. Green, Frank H. Lamson, Fred F. Moore, George W. Rand and Frank W. Taylor.

Nearly all the aspirants had put in much work and each had succeeded in drawing out a large number of friends. One candidate had two teams in readiness tonight, carrying his votes to and from the polls. Many of the voters came to the hall with the tickets of their choice which they had received days in advance. It is doubtful if a more enthusiastic and more lively meeting was ever held in the state.

Four ballots were required to decide upon the successful aspirant. Fred H. Moore being the final choice. He received 281 votes out of a possible 433 and had an overwhelming lead over his nearest competitor. The selection was a popular one.

The voters decided to adopt a new school schedule, and the bells will hereafter ring at eight o'clock in the morning and one o'clock in the afternoon.

The final game in the duck pin series between Charles Blithen of Portsmouth and John Troy of Exeter was played on the Rockingham alleys last evening. The game was a tie, each securing a total of 257. Troy won the series by 27 pins, however, as he defeated Blithen by that score at Portsmouth last Monday night. A match has now been arranged between Blithen and G. E. Smith, the first game to be played at Portsmouth next Monday night.

The electric lights in Exeter are dangerous to life and property. This is a strange statement, but it is true nevertheless. As Officer Hamilton was patrolling his beat on Upper Water street recently, he found an electric light pole "alive." From the iron rods on the pole were shooting innumerable electric sparks. The young boys thought it great fun and were hovering around the pole like flies. The officer had great difficulty in keeping them away. Last evening Officer Hamilton discovered another live pole on upper Front street. This was caused by the telegraph and electric wires crossing.

Charles E. Robinson, a well known teamster of Exeter, had a narrow escape from serious injury, and perhaps death, at Stratham last evening. He had gone to Portsmouth during the day with a load of furniture. He was returning in the evening and was just below the Stratham car barn when his furniture was struck by an electric car that left Exeter at 8:05 o'clock. Mr. Robinson saw the car coming, and as his team was on the track started to get off. The car was coming too fast, however, and it struck the wing of the van, demolishing it. The vestile of the car was also somewhat damaged. Mr. Robinson was thrown forward onto the horses, and fell to the ground. That he received nothing more than slight bruises on the head and chest was miraculous. The other man in the team, John Goodale, was not hurt.

AN ANCIENT HANDTUB.

Oldest Machine in Existence Now Owned in Philadelphia.

One of the oldest handtubs in the country, and probably the oldest in existence, says William D. Dennis in an article in the latest number of the Essex Institute Historical Collections was secured in March, 1750 by the Old Fire club of Salem.

It was called the Union. It was a small affair, and had no suction, being filled with buckets. This engine remained in Salem until 1866, when it was presented to the William Penn engine company of Philadelphia and carried away. It is still in good condition in that city, and its departure from Salem has been keenly felt for many years. It was given away by one of the local fire companies in a burst of generosity, and really without a right.

Mr. Dennis says that this engine though not the first to be used in the country, is probably the oldest in existence in our land today. He says that it is recorded that in 1664 Joseph Jenks of Lynn built an engine for the town of Boston. One year after the purchase of the Union a second engine was bought by Benjamin Lynde and others, so that the town then had two engines and a fire club. The next engine was one imported from England by Benjamin Pickman, which cost £73 4s 6d. This was in 1767.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

A Remedy Which Has Revolutionized the Treatment of Stomach Troubles.

The remedy is not heralded as a wonderful discovery nor yet a secret patent medicine, neither is it claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach troubles with which nine out of ten suffer.

The remedy is in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges, containing vegetable and fruit essences, pure aseptic pepsin (government test), golden seal and diarsase. The tablets are sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Many interesting experiments to test the digestive power of Stuart's Tablets show that one grain of the active principal contained in them is sufficient to thoroughly digest 3,000 grains of raw meat, eggs and other wholesome food.

Stuart's Tablets do not act upon the bowels like after dinner pills and cheap cathartics, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines without having any effect whatever in digesting food or curing indigestion.

If the stomach can be rested and assisted in the work of digestion it will very soon recover its normal vigor, as no organ is so much abused and overworked as the stomach.

This is the secret, if there is any secret, of the remarkable success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a remedy practically unknown a few years ago and now the most widely known of any treatment for stomach weakness.

This success has been secured entirely upon its merits as a digestive pure and simple because there can be no stomach trouble if the food is promptly digested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act entirely on the food eaten, digesting it completely, so that it can be assimilated into blood, nerve and tissue. They cure dyspepsia, water brash, sour stomach, gas and bloating after meals, because they furnish the digestive power which weak stomachs lack and unless that lack is supplied it is useless to attempt to cure by the use of "tonics," "pills" and "cathartics" which have absolutely no digestive power.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores and the regular use of one or two of them after meals, will demonstrate their merit better than any other argument.

FRIDAY, MARCH 27, 1903.

A BLIGHTED CAREER.

The suicide of Sir Hector Archibald MacDonald removes from the British army one of its most gallant officers and brings to a sad and tragic close one of the most brilliant careers in the military annals of the empire.

Hector MacDonald was not the son of a noble house. His childhood was passed in the humblest circumstances and his own bravery secured his advancement from the rank of private to that of major general in the royal army. He saw service in India, Afghanistan, South Africa, Egypt and the Sudan and was affectionately styled by the soldiers "Fighting Mac."

Besides being a major general and a baronet, he was awarded many other honors. He was aide-de-camp to King Edward, a Companion of the Bath, and a member of the Order of the Medjidie and belonged to a dozen other military societies.

That a man with such a record, a man who, by his own efforts, had gained the admiration and esteem of his countrymen and of the world, should die by his own hand and in disgrace is sad, indeed. The charges against Gen. MacDonald are said to have been of a nature which, if they were true, permitted of no such thing as leniency and his self-destruction amounted to a confession of guilt.

There can, therefore, be no sympathy for Gen. MacDonald. Sorrow that he should have thus blighted his splendid career is natural, but a man of his ability and intelligence and who held a position such as his, had no excuse for wrong-doing. He was the idol of the British soldiers and of the British people. He had been placed on a pedestal and was pointed out as a shining example to ambitious youths. His fall did not injure himself alone. He was a popular hero and as such belonged to the people. A man like him should have kept himself clean and bequeathed to posterity a name which would have been an aspiration to found a place in the human heart. His death, with the cloud of disgrace hanging over him, destroyed entirely the value of the example he had set for perseverance and faithful service.

Gen. MacDonald's untimely death has rightly caused Britain to mourn, but sympathy, in his case, must be withheld.

The developments of the Burdick inquest make us think that perhaps we can't afford to throw any stones at the court of Saxony.

The delay in the announcement of the spring coal prices is probably due to the hope of the operators that April will bring a cold wave.

Germany has a pretty toy in her new navy, but the world is unaccountably backward in expressing a proper appreciation of Germany's handsome plaything.

Trouble is apprehended in China on account of the anti-foreign feeling. The present probability is that the Chinamen will get more of the trouble than the foreigners.

District Attorney Coatesworth says the public now knows as much about the Burdick case as the authorities. This does not presuppose a very extensive public knowledge.

If the American flag was really fired on in Honduras, the people of that country are likely to find that they have something more serious on their hands than a comic opera civil war.

The fact that a magazine has a circulation of a million copies isn't conclusive proof of its merit. The lurid tales of the exploits of the late Jesse James are said to have had an enormous sale.

The editor of the Boston Journal says that much imported "extra dry" tastes as if its basis were New England cider. The Journal editor is fortunate; not every newspaper man can afford champagne.

McLANE FOR GOVERNOR.

Milford's Foremost Citizen May Be State's Chief Magistrate.

The Milford Cabinet in its issue of the current week, will say: It is very gratifying, not only to the people of Milford, where the subject of this sketch has always made his home, but also to his friends throughout the state, who are legion, to know definitely that Mr. McLane will be a candidate for the governorship at the next election in 1904. This cannot be a surprise to many, however, for the trend of events makes Mr. McLane the logical candidate of the republican party for the nomination at that time.

This announcement made this early in the campaign, is not for the purpose of serving notice on other aspirants for this high office that they need not enter the contest, for no one realizes better than Mr. McLane himself that this office is the gift of the people, and that the great body of voters decide who shall be their standard bearer at the proper place and at the proper time. It is because other candidates, perhaps thinking Mr. McLane would not be in the field, have made their own "announcements" and are intent on keeping up what appears an unreasonable agitation, that he has been persuaded thus early to place him-

FEEDS ONE—STARVES OTHER

Feeds the body—starves the microbes! That is what Scott's Emulsion does in consumption.

We can't expect to understand all about these germs and microbes the doctors talk of. They say that one kind causes consumption. Consumption microbes feed on weak lungs. Perhaps that's so.

At any rate we know that Scott's Emulsion has a peculiar action on the lungs which gives the lungs new life and vigor. Healthy lungs starve the microbes out.

Life for the lungs and flesh for the body, that is what the consumptive has a right to expect from Scott's Emulsion. An ideal food and tonic for any form of wasting disease.

self squarely before the people, and will await the verdict of the people, when they eventually decide the question themselves.

The name of John McLane has often before been spoken of in connection with the governorship of New Hampshire, and not unnaturally either, although he never has made a contest for the nomination before the convention, as he is one who believes that "the office should seek the man rather than the man the office," and has never, and will not resort to the cheap political methods so often common in contests of this kind. His name has heretofore been spoken of in this connection, more frequently and persistently by his friends rather than by himself. That Mr. McLane will make the strongest kind of a candidate no one will for one moment dispute. The party may need just such a candidate as he will make at the next election. Elements of dissatisfaction at some of the positions of the republican party at the present time make it especially desirable that a strong candidate be nominated, one on whom all factions can unite with confidence. No better man to meet this requirement can be found than Mr. McLane. He is popular with all classes of people. He is the friend of labor and has the confidence of the capitalists and the manufacturers of the state. He is well equipped for the position, and for many years has been in close touch with state affairs, and no man in the state is better qualified to step from private life into a public office requiring good judgment and familiarity with state matters than is Mr. McLane. Public spirited and progressive, he has the esteem and confidence, not only of the people of the community in which he lives but of all the people of the state. He has always held a high place in the republican party of his state. Few men are better known in business, Masonic or political circles, and none more favorably. His citizenship is of the highest order, and we venture the prediction that the nomination as the next standard bearer of the republican party will go to him, as it did to Governor Jordan, without a contest, as a recognition not only of merit, but as an honor well befitting the man.

Mr. McLane was born Feb. 27, 1852 in Lennox Town, Scotland, from which place, in 1853, his parents, Alexander and Mary (Hay) McLane, brought him to this country, locating in Manchester. Young McLane was subsequently reared in that city, obtaining his education in the public schools. When 17 or 19 years old he turned his attention to mechanical pursuits, for which he had a special aptitude. Becoming skilled as a worker in wood, he labored as a journeyman for several years, as a manufacturer of furniture of all kinds. In 1876 he established himself in business on his own account in Milford, where he has since remained. He began as a manufacturer of post office furniture and equipments, putting to the best possible use the limited capital at his command. By wise management he built up a large and lucrative business, and won for himself a position among the foremost business men of the state.

He has for many years been a director in the Souhegan National bank and its president since 1891. In 1885 and 1887 he was elected to the lower branch of the state legislature, serving his constituents for two terms as their representative. He subsequently served for an equal length of time as state senator, being elected in 1891 and 1893, and during both terms was president of the senate, acquitting himself with ability as a presiding officer. For many years he has been moderator of the annual town meeting which he has conducted with fairness to both parties. He has held many responsible positions in the gift of his fellow citizens and the duties of which he has always performed cheerfully and satisfactorily. In Masonry he has held the highest positions in the gift of the fraternity in the state.

On March 10, 1880, Mr. McLane married Miss Ellen L. Tuck, daughter of the late Eben Tuck of Milford. They have four children, namely, Clinton A., a student at Harvard college; Hazel E., a student at Bryn Mawr, Philadelphia; John R., a student at St. Paul's, Concord; and Charles M. He attends and is a liberal contributor to the Congregational church.

Not alone will Milford be honored in the nomination of Mr. McLane, but the state will be assured of a capable, efficient and conservative conduct of public affairs.

In a Carefully Prepared Article recommends Dr. D. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

In a recent issue of the New York Magazine of Sanitation and Hygiene, the recognized authority on all matters pertaining to health, James H. Montgomery, M. D., says editorially:

"After a careful investigation of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, a specific for kidney, liver and bladder troubles, rheumatism, dyspepsia and constipation with its attendant ills, we are free to confess that a more meritorious medicine has never come under the examination of the chemical and medical experts of the New York Magazine of Sanitation and Hygiene. In fact, after the most searching tests and rigid inquiry into the record of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, it becomes a duty to recommend its use in unequivocal term to every reader of this journal whose complaint comes within the list of ailments which this remedy is advertised to cure. We have obtained such overwhelming proof of the efficacy of this specific—have so satisfactorily demonstrated its curative powers through personal experiments—that a care for the interests of our readers leads us to call attention to its great value."

JAMES H. MONTGOMERY, M. D. It is for sale by all druggists in the New York City and the regular $1.00 size bottles—less than a cent a dose. Sample bottle—enough for trial, free by mail. Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y.

UNION LABEL FAIR.
That And Other Important Matters Considered By The Central Labor Union.
At a largely attended meeting of the Central Labor union held on Thursday evening, much business of importance was brought up for discussion.
The committees in charge of the different arrangements for the coming union label fair reported everything as progressing smoothly. The exhibition promises to be the equal of anything of its kind held in New England.
For the opening night George E. McNeil, the father of the labor movement in America, has been engaged as the speaker. On the second night a celebrated lady speaker will address the lady workers. The third night a speaker from the ranks of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union will hold forth.
Exhibitions from as far west as Canton, O., and as far south as Richmond, Va., have engaged space in the exhibition hall and will make interesting displays. The entertainment committee is in correspondence with several first class attractions.
It was also voted to hold mass meetings once in every month, at which time competent speakers would be in attendance and a strong effort made to advance the causes of labor. The failure of the present state legislature to favorably act upon any of the many bills introduced in the labor cause was discussed at length and a movement started toward the placing of a labor ticket in the field.
PROCLAMATION ISSUED.
Voters Officially Informed of Amendments to the Constitution.
Governor Dacheider on Thursday issued a proclamation informing the people of New Hampshire that the constitution of the state is amended as provided for in the first, second, fourth and eighth propositions or questions submitted by the constitutional convention to the qualified voters of the state at meetings held in the several towns, city wards and places in this state on the second Tuesday of March. All the alterations and amendments in said constitution covered by said several propositions or questions have been adopted, and the constitution is thus amended by the suffrages of more than two-thirds of the legal voters present at said meetings and voting upon said questions.
He further proclaims to the people of this state that the constitution of the state is not amended, as provided for in the third, fifth, seventh, ninth and tenth propositions.

KAISER NOT SO MUCH.
Admiral Dewey Believes His Navy To Be Overestimated.
Admiral George Dewey, according to an interview in the Newark Evening News, on Wednesday night made comparisons between the United States navy, which he pronounced the greatest in the world, and the German navy. He believed the latter's efficiency was greatly overestimated.
Regarding the Caribbean maneuvers, Admiral Dewey said that they were a great object lesson to the world, especially to the Kaiser. He entertained grave doubts as to the Panama canal scheme, believing the canal could be easily blocked by the enemy in time of war. It was in his home in Washington that the admiral, according to the Evening News, said:

"The United States navy is the greatest in the world, for this reason: Every man in the service is a man of intelligence. He knows just what to do and the right time to do it. A warship is an enormous machine shop, and every part of that ponderous creation must be operated by intelligence. The German navy, for instance, is an entirely different organization in its make-up of human material.
"I have made a deep study of that navy. My belief is that its efficiency in possible action is greatly overestimated. The men do not begin to compare in education and intelligence with the Americans. Their men have, in my opinion, been educated so that they look to the officers and depend upon them for specific instructions in the least matters. The maneuvers in the Caribbean were not only successful but were the greatest object lesson of the kind, probably, that the world has ever seen. It was an object lesson to the Kaiser more than to any other person. Think of it, fifty-four warships including colliers and all. Germany could not possibly get a fleet over here that could fight such an aggregation of warships as that."

PREPARING FINE PROGRAM.
Gerald Whitman of the Portsmouth Conservatory of Music is preparing a fine program for his fifth annual concert, to occur soon in Pelree hall. The Beethoven String Quartette of Haverhill, a famous singer and a fine concert pianist will assist.
This concert will be given the following evening after Mr. Whitman's piano pupils' recital, which this year, will be given in Conservatory hall in the afternoon for the first three grade pupils and for advanced pupils in the evening.
INTERESTING GRANGE DISCUSSION.
A largely attended meeting of Strawberry Bank grange was held on Thursday evening in Red Mens' hall. The principal feature was a discussion, in which Mrs. James Foote took the subject, "How I would farm if I were a man," and William Dunbar spoke on the topic, "How I would keep house if I were a woman."
Music added to the pleasures of the evening.

"I've Lost Ten Pounds"
A man says, "Look at this." And he over-laps his coat to show how loose it is. There are some people who can lose fat to advantage, but the loss of flesh is one of the accepted evidences of failing health. As flesh-making processes begin in the stomach, naturally, when there is loss of flesh we look first to the stomach for the cause. And the cause is generally found to be disease of the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts, resulting in loss of nutrition and consequent physical weakness.
Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restores the lost flesh by curing diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition and enabling the perfect absorption and assimilation of food from which flesh and strength are made.
"My wife was for five years troubled with indigestion of stomach and bowels, bloating and severe pain at times during dinner." writes Mr. J. Milton Vinger, of McConnellsburg, Pa. "Her heart was affected, and she took a purgative every few days but only received temporary relief. She got very poor in flesh and I bought one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from our druggist and after taking it she said she felt like a new woman. She has no more trouble with stomach and bowels, and has no pain nor bloating. She gained fifteen pounds in weight."
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and biliousness.

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

If Not, What Better Proof Can Portsmouth Residents Ask For?

This is the statement of a Portsmouth citizen.

The testimony of a neighbor.

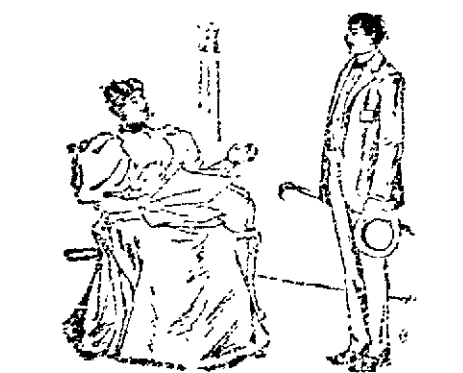

You can readily investigate it.

The proof should convince you.

Mr. Lemuel White, of 25 Bridge street, ex-conductor of the D. & M. R. R., says:—"I had something wrong with my kidneys for five years; at first there were pains and aches in the small of my back; then annoyances from the kidney secretions set in and broke my rest at night. I was depressed with languor and loss of energy. I thought from reading notices about Doan's Kidney Pills that they might help me and I procured a box at Philbrick's pharmacy. They acted on my kidneys right away. The urinary difficulty was the first to mend. When on my second box I could sit comfortably without experiencing that jerking of the limbs that every other remedy had failed to stop. I am confident that a better remedy does not exist."

LOW PRICES.

Many people shout Low Prices. The prices are low—so is the quality of the goods. We say low prices and we back up the statement with a good strong reason. We can make the low clothing—make it as well as it can be made—at low prices, because our expenses are light and we have many patrons. There is no use throwing money away. There is no use paying any more for perfection than you have to. We will be glad to see you at any time.

PRINCE OF PILSEN

Has Good Libretto, Pleasing Music, and Is Well Staged.

"CYNTHIA" IS NOT A SUCCESS

Play in Which Elsie de Wolfe Is Starring Proves Unattractive—The Chief Character Is Silly, and the Story Is Weak.

A good libretto and good music are a rare combination in musical comedy, and we have it at last. The "Prince of Pilsen" is a good musical comedy, and it is a good story. The libretto is by Frank Pixley, and the music is by Gustav Linders. The story is a good one, and the music is good. The libretto is by Frank Pixley, and the music is by Gustav Linders. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

Frank Pixley wrote the book, and there is no sensational literary value, but there are many bright lines and some real fun. The libretto is by Frank Pixley, and the music is by Gustav Linders. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

The International hotel, in Nice, is expending the Prince of Pilsen, which no one knows personally, and when the brewer from Chiemsee arrives he is mistaken for the prince. The comedy is a good one, and the music is good.

Daughter of a brewer and does not mind a scandal, for when she tries to elope with the prince she is always stopped by a very real and very real prince. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

Cynthia exists only in the fertile brain of Herbert Henry Davies. A woman of the imagination is she, and I am glad that is the only thing she occupies. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

The libretto is by Frank Pixley, and the music is by Gustav Linders. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

Cynthia is a woman of the imagination, and I am glad that is the only thing she occupies. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

Cherry, who is the only child of a wealthy man. This Mr. Jerold (G. Harrison Hunter) has never met his daughter-in-law, and eighteen months after the marriage he calls on them in their luxurious home in Pont Street to find out on their lavish expenditures. The story is a good one, and the music is good.

Elsie de Wolfe. gestions are silly. After dinner coffee, she decides, is the only thing she will be able to do without. When later she hears her darling husband say he cannot afford a new style of coat just in, she begins to think, and as that is too great an effort she sends her maid for a money lender of whom she has heard and replenishes from his coffers. In this transaction she keeps mum, and the husband spends the incoming money, asks no questions and "trusts" Cynthia. It is so natural. The young man Teddy (Arnold Daly), who is their friend, is wealthy, and when he accidentally finds that she owes £2,000, with interest at 50 percent, he is horrified, and when the lender, Isaacs (Max Freeman), is calling for payment he offers to give him a check and free her. This she refuses, and though a loyal wife, the world ascribes to Teddy their continued affluence since the father cast them off.

Later they go into rooms and sell everything, and there she agrees to dance on the stage of a music hall to aid Albert to rise, as her ignorance of business caused her trouble with Isaacs and they lost all in repaying him. The timely arrival of the father and aunt to save Albert from going to the Gold Coast and dying of fever causes an exhibition of the skirt dance, and the manager and the father bid against each other. The father's pile is the biggest, and an offer is made poor Albert to go into his father's office at a large salary. Miss de Wolfe as Cynthia was not true, and the part does not suit her. Touches of sentiment showed her at her best, but they were few. The real star of the cast was Max Freeman, who did artistic work. Charles Cherry and Kate Pattison Sellen were excellent.

MARY A. BARTOW.
NEW YORK.
GREAT TRIAL FOR 1903.

Famous Stables in Star Two-year-old Stake Race.

Judging from the character of the stake entries to the Coney Island (New York) Jockey club juvenile events excellent sport is assured in that particular branch of racing. Reports from the race courses adjacent to New York city are all to the effect that the favorites of the great racing establishments are all doing well, there being no sickness of a serious nature. At this time last year there were almost daily bulletins of illness in the stable of William C. Whitney, and the whole history of the turf of 1902 was probably changed when his splendid collection of three-year-olds one after another was attacked with influenza.

By far the most important two-year-old stake to be run at the spring meeting of the Coney Island Jockey club is the $25,000 Great Trial, entries for which were recently made public. The well known stables of Messrs. August Belmont, Perry Belmont, William C. Whitney, S. S. Brown, J. H. & P. P. Koenig, J. E. Madden, James Flanagan, G. B. Morris, John W. Schorr and others are represented heavily, as well as newcomers, such as Sydney Sweet, M. H. Tidmore, R. A. Smith, Henry L. Tammann, Edward Wasserman, W. T. S. Butler, Fred Cook, C. A. Draper and D. C. Johnson.

Western talismans are better represented than usual at spring meetings in the east, which in its fitly and judiciously indicates how far the interest in racing is growing and affords a guarantee that the liberality of the various racing associations in response to the suggestions of the Jockey club is being quickly repeated.

An English Cycler's Exploit.
F. B. Chase recently performed a wonderful motor cycling feat at Canning Town track, near London, England. He broke all records from six to ten miles, covering the latter distance in 12m. 50.15s.

For The Davis Cup.
The week of Aug. 7 at the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston, ends the English Lawn Tennis season for the Davis Cup, for the Davis challenge trophy.

COSTUMES FOR EASTER.

Pretty Things in Neckwear—Why Tagging Is Popular.

New York, March 24.—As Easter approaches, new fashions are shown everywhere. Neckwear is popular, and I imagine they are never more popular in dress than they are now. Not only are the principal fashions in neckwear, but the accessories to the neckwear are well shown. The neckwear is all in the line of the neck, and the accessories are all in the line of the neck. The neckwear is all in the line of the neck, and the accessories are all in the line of the neck.

Very long stole effects are produced in some of the designs, and the ends not infrequently reach the feet. Generally this particular piece is made of fine batiste, with insets and edging of Irish crochet, which maintains its popularity. Stocks, which are almost the same shape and kind as those of a year ago, are made of featherbone and silk muslin, and the lace is then set on, mostly in small designs, but of coarse mesh. This makes extremely elegant neckwear, particularly when there are fancy bows and ends of pretty ribbon or a tucked mull scarf. Sometimes these scarfs are edged with fancy chenille or ball fringe. Stocks are more becoming to some persons than most things, and there are so many different fancies that it would be unprofitable to mention any of them. One may say, however, that the same shape of turnovers is still in vogue, and everything seems to be employed to develop something new in that shape. Some are tucked, others hemstitched, more embroidered with wheels or floral designs in white or in colors. Grapes and black berries are still popular.

Tagging is fully as well liked as last season, and many beautiful stocks and collars are made of this work joining fine cable braid. One reason why tagging is so much liked is because it must be done by hand, and in these days hand work is at a premium. That is also why the waists and other hand embroidered garments are so desired and so very expensive. We have been told that even I almost believed it that the ladies of the Six Hundred considered the most of their own garments. Lately I have happened to see some of them buying their clothes, and surely there could have been nothing left to embroider. The most exquisite hand work was bought in such quantities that it made my eyes open wide. And you can find everything possible to imagine all ready to make up.

There are set pieces intended for robes, belts, sleeve ornaments, and handbags for waists. All one has to do is to make the waist and put the lace or embroidered trimming on. The illustration shows how lace is applied to a taffeta waist. The whole is laced with a row of narrow insertion through which is run Tom Thumb ribbon. The lace design is applied on the

The top and upper part of the sleeves and the waists. A stock is made of silk the same shade as the Tom Thumb ribbon. Tagging is shown in the other waist. The garment is of black moire laid in one inch all around except where there are bias bands of black faille, lacetulle, lace, or the more with canary silk. The same design is carried out all through.

Among the handiwork of the silks for waists is a new white in armure effect, and nothing could be richer than this trimmed with the lace sets provided for the occasion. These motifs are applied as best suits the wearer, but many of the sets have no choice in the manner of application, as they are planned especially for yokes, cuffs, sleeves or some other special purpose. Matched embroideries are also offered in headbands, insertions, and set pieces. These all go to make a perfect waist.

Needs of Feasibility.
"Yes, take it," announced the physical culturist, "you will be surprised at the miracles your system can work. It can increase your shoulder measure, round several inches, to your satisfaction and increase your weight."

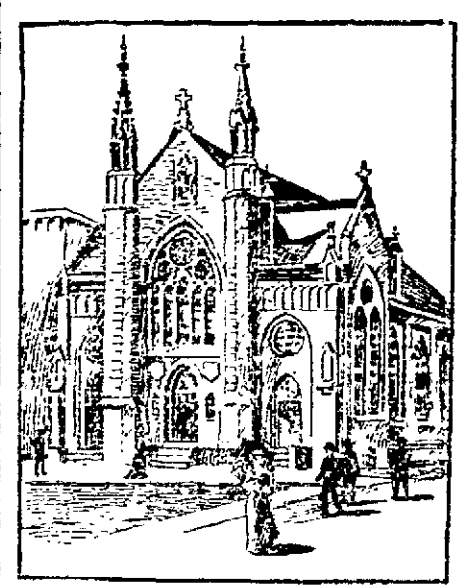

"But," interposed a fair maid, "your dressmakers would all that for us in no time. What we want to know is how to get a twenty-three inch waist into a sixteen inch corset and a No. 5 foot into a No. 2 shoe without taking chloroform."—L.A.

ROOSEVELT'S CHURCH

THE NEW EDIFICE WHERE THE PRESIDENT WILL WORSHIP.

Handsome and Commodious Structure to Supersede the Small and Crowded Chapel of Grace Reformed Church in Washington.

Washington, March 24.—The building in which President Roosevelt has worshipped since his inauguration is one of the humblest church edifices in the city. It is the modest chapel of Grace Reformed church, located in Fifteenth street, just opposite G street, and was built years ago, when the congregation was small in numbers and poor in purse. At the time the plot of ground was purchased the finances of the church would not permit the erection of a large and costly edifice, so a small chapel was built on the rear of the lot,

NEW GRACE REFORMED CHURCH, WASHINGTON.

the intention being to put up a fine structure on the main portion of the ground when it could be afforded. In due season that time came, and the new Grace church, now nearly completed, will be dedicated within the coming month.

This gratifying result has been largely accomplished through the zealous efforts of the pastor, Rev. Dr. John M. Schick, though the project of building a new church was advanced before his pastorate began. It is pertinent also to state that the proposition was adopted long before President Roosevelt selected the church as his place of worship, although his advent doubtless helped along the project very materially.

The movement for a new church was begun in 1899. Dr. Schick became the pastor in 1900 and at once threw himself into the work of increasing the building fund. Twenty-five per cent of it was raised before President Roosevelt's inauguration, but when he became a member of the church interest in the proposed new building was awakened throughout the church at large, and many outside contributions were received. When completed, the church will have cost about $50,000.

The new Grace church will have a feature entirely new in church architecture in that the decorations on the face of the structure will tell the history of the Protestant reformation of the sixteenth century. This idea originated with Dr. Schick and was further developed and completed by the architect, Paul J. Pelz.

On either side of the central entrance doors are the shields of Zurich and Geneva, the places in which Ulrich Zwingli, the first proclaimer of the reform in Switzerland, and John Calvin, the master mind of the same reformation, prosecuted their labors. In the gable at the top is the shield of Frederick III., the patron under whose auspices the Heidelberg Catechism was prepared. It is represented as supported by a female figure, symbolizing the fact that in the beginning of the denomination's work in America it was supported by the classic of Amsterdam of the Reformed church in Holland. The two supports of the label molding are heads of the Swiss knight and the Swiss burglar from whom this German Reformed church sprang, and in the tympanum of the two side entrances is a representation of a lily growing under thorns, to represent the martyr character of the reform party in the Protestant reformation of the sixteenth century.

This symbol has been used in all the churches of this denomination to commemorate the fact of the martyr character and the sufferings endured by the Reformed churches in their beginnings and to express the confidence of the followers of this faith in the triumph of God's truth and life in spite of initial environment and painful oppression. On the front of the edifice appears also the inscription "Grace Reformed Church."

The need of a new and large place of worship for the growing congregation of Grace church has for some time been urgent. The little chapel has long been unable to accommodate more than half of those who seek admission each Sunday. When it was built, there was no thought in the minds of the projectors that one day its humble roof would shelter the head of the republic. It has a seating capacity of only 175, and the membership alone is 200. One third of the seating space is devoted to visitors, and every Sunday from 200 to 300 are turned away. The pews in the new church will be free, as they are in the little chapel, but one will be reserved for the president and his friends. SAMUEL H. THURMAN.

WITH THE WRITERS.

Two Anecdotes of Booth Tarkington—The Real Little Dorrit.

Chicago, March 23.—When Booth Tarkington, the novelist and legislator of Indiana, was first turned loose from college, he at once began what he describes as "fussing" with literature. He helped to launch and keep afloat for a few months an obscure magazine of the freshly amateur sort. This magazine was called John-a-Dreams and went so far as to construct out of whole cloth a "lady writer," together with excerpts from her works, and to serve up to its small public "an appreciation" of the same.

Tarkington held the purely honorary position of staff artist to this publication, and because he disclaimed all ability to draw he was allowed to sign his sketches with his real name. Because he made some pretensions to an ability to write he was compelled to sign all his literary contributions with the nom de plume Cecil Woodford.

This, of course, was very effective in keeping Tarkington out of the public eye and away from public prints—a service for which he now occasionally longs as he reads in the daily papers things he never said and accounts of things he never did. Such is the story of his intention to leave social life and settle down on a farm; likewise the story of the doughnut factory—though what he is reported to have said about it has almost the ring of the true Tarkington humor.

A friend one day was lounging on some available space not covered by various pieces of Tarkington's temporarily castoff sketches. Tarkington was keeping up a somewhat jerky conversation. Suddenly he dived into a bureau drawer and fished up a good sized roll of manila legal cap.

"That's the start of a new story," he said, looking at it and handling it for half a minute as if he didn't know what to do with it. "I think it's going to be better than anything I have yet done. I've got it pretty well roughed out here. I'm carrying it around in my grip sack, and if I were to lose it I couldn't reproduce it."

This was the first manuscript of "The Two Vanavels." It had not occurred to Tarkington to have it typewritten and leave one copy in a safe somewhere.

The current revival of interest in Charles Dickens, his works, his haunts and in the originals of his most celebrated characters has resulted in throwing the glare of publicity upon an old lady at Southgate, England, who has just passed her ninetieth birthday and tells how she came to be the original of Little Dorrit.

She is Mrs. Mary Ann Cooper. Her father, a well-to-do farmer, had a place at Sunbury, where Dickens in his early youth was a frequent visitor.

"My Charles," Mrs. Cooper has always called the novelist. Between Mary Ann and Charles the closest friendship—almost ripening into something more—sprang up, and the old lady is never tired of telling their adventures and misadventures in the heyday of youth.

Dickens had a habit of giving nicknames to his friends and relatives, as he had a way of giving literary names to his sons. His name for Miss Mitton was Little Dorrit.

"Why did he give you this name?" she was asked on her ninetieth birthday. "How did you come to get into the Marshalsea and be famous ever afterward?"

"Well, I cannot exactly say," she answered; "but, as I have told you, Charles and I were, I think I may say, very fond of each other, and one day at home he told us, 'The next book I write I shall put you in it, and I shall call it "Little Dorrit."'" Thus his next work was named.

Mrs. Cooper, however, never was in the Marshalsea debtors' prison.

Margaret Sutton Briscoe, who wrote that capital book of stories, "Dinty and Others," is the wife of Professor A. J. Hopkins, who fills the chair of chemistry at Amherst college. Her home is a delightful one, set in the midst of extensive grounds and overlooking a vast range of the Connecticut valley. Mrs. Hopkins has solved the problem of how a woman may devote energy and time to her professional literary life without sacrificing her domestic life in any respect. She has a little daughter who so enthusiastically approves of her mother that she has already, at the age of five, avowed her determination to become a literary woman.

WIRELESS TRIUMPHS

HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL UNDERTAKING ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

One System That Has Been in Commercial Use For Nearly Six Months. How the Interception of Messages Is Prevented.

[Special Correspondence.]
Santa Catalina Island, Cal., March 18.—While other places have wireless telegraph stations, it is the boast of the Santa Catalina Islanders that their locality possesses the first station in the world to be put to practical commercial uses. For nearly six months wireless messages have been sent across the bay of Avalon from White's point to this island, a distance of almost three ty-three miles. During this time over 3,000 communications have been made, yet not one complaint has been made of error or delay. As a result of this success stations will soon be established all along the Pacific coast from Los Angeles to Alaska. Furthermore, plans are being laid for wireless connections between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands.

PACIFIC WIRELESS TELEGRAPH STATION.

The system used here differs materially from that of Marconi, one of the principal points of difference being the absence of the coherer used by Marconi to pick up the electric waves. In a recent interview the originator of the system said that he had discovered in California the presence of a great deal of atmospheric electricity, which would affect the coherer similarly to the electric impulse sent out from the transmitting station. For this reason he had been compelled to substitute for the coherer a device which would overcome the atmospheric interference. This device is in the nature of a very sensitive receiver, responding more quickly than the coherer does. From fifteen to twenty words a minute are now sent, thanks to this device, and improvements are expected to double this rate of speed.

The equipment of the Catalina island station is much like that of the well known Marconi stations. It consists of an engine and a dynamo, induction coil, Morse key, spark balls and mast. The current is opened and closed through the induction coil by the manipulation of the sending key, and the operator, using the Morse alphabet, transmits his message through the ether just as he would over the telegraph wire, it being received by sound on the receiving instrument in the station whither it has been sent.

W. G. Sener, the man in charge of the station on this island, was for nearly twenty years telegraph operator and train dispatcher for the Pennsylvania railroad. He is enthusiastic over the success already attained by wireless methods. What particularly pleases him is the fact that the Pacific system has found a way of providing for secrecy in the sending of messages. As explained by Mr. Sener, an outside station has to be in exact tune or vibration with the sending station in order to intercept the other waves, and, as the sending station has found a way of changing the vibration every second, if necessary, it would be extremely difficult for the outside station to receive messages other than those intended for it.

According to Mr. Sener, climatic changes do not have a noticeable effect on wireless telegraphy as practiced on the coast, with the exception that while it is raining or is very foggy the messages seem to come more clearly. The importance of this is evident, for it greatly enhances the value of the wireless for marine work.

Similarly the running of trains during or after a severe storm will be greatly facilitated, and already the Southern Pacific Railroad company is experimenting with the system with a view of ultimately substituting it for the regular telegraphic method used in train dispatching. An experimental car has been fitted up, and stations are to be established at Omaha, Ogden, Salt Lake City and other cities. It will be seen that if this is proved feasible the railroads of the country will be saved from the costly wrecks that have been so frequent of recent years.
